MPS market update

In an encouraging start to the year equity markets were strongly positive in January, buoyed by re-emerging hopes for a soft-landing. Global bond markets also began the year on the front foot with fears of further rate rises moderating as inflation declined.

The Federal Reserve and Bank of England appeared to confirm investors' optimism that the worst of the tightening cycle may be over at the start of February, despite hiking rates by 25 and 50 basis points respectively. Both indicated a more data dependent approach when it came to the prospect of more rate hikes. The European Central Bank (ECB) on the other hand continued to talk tough, but bond markets responded by rallying nonetheless.

In the US, the S&P 500 was +6.3% in one of the strongest starts to the year in decades. Technology stocks led the rally, with the tech heavy NASDAQ Index +10.7% for the month. In a reversal of some of last year's trends, relative strength came from the technology and communication services sectors and weakness from the less cyclical sectors such as utilities, consumer staples and healthcare. European equities started off the year as one of the top performing assets (+9.9%), ending the month by outperforming the UK's FTSE 100 and the US' S&P 500.
